Choice Poetry.

"Meet Me There." The last rays of the setting sun Were lingering in the west, I stood by one whose race was run, And soon she sank to rest. But ere the spirit took its flight, From this dark world of care, To realms of everlasting light, She whispered, "Meet me there !"

I'd loved her long, and loved her true, And sad at heart was I, For all were weeping when they knew That she, yes she, must diel All listened for her parting words-She was so good and fair-But all the accents that they heard Were, "Meet, oh, meet me there!"

She died, as gentle as the dew Falls on the opening flower, And died, as she had lived, as true As ever graced earth's bower, I wiped the death-damp off her brow, And parted back her hair, And when I kissed her cold, cold cheek She murmured, "Meet me there!"

We laid her in the silent grave, And sadly left her there To sleep the long, long sleep of death, Although so good and fair; And still I travel on and seek A place where free from care, I'll meet my lost one yet again-· I'll meet yes, meet her there!

The Old Story.

Summer moonbeams softly playing, Light the woods of Castle Keep; And there I see a maiden straying, Where the shadows creep. She is listening-meekly, purely, To the wooer at her side; 'Tis the "old, old story," surely, Running on like time and tide. Maiden fair, oh! have a care; Vows are many--truth is rare.

He is courtly, she is simple,

Lordly doublet speaks his lot; She is wearing hood and wimple-His the castle, hers the cot. Sweeter far she 'eems his whisper, Than the night bird's dulcet thrill She is smiling--he beguiling--'Tis the "old, old story" still. Maiden fair, oh! have a care; Vows are many-truth is rare.

The autumn sun is quickly going Behind the woods of Castle Keep; The air is chill -- the night wind blowing, And there I see a maiden weep. Her cheeks are white--her brow is aching--The "old, old story," sad and brief, Of heart betrayed, and left, nigh breaking, In mute despair and lonely grief. Maiden fair, oh! have a care;

Vows are many--truth is rare.

The adage that "a man who is his own lawyer has a fool for a cli-Mr. Edgeford sat down, and the ent," was strikingly illustrated at This settled the verdict at once, you: I didn't mean to tell the thing in the last nine months.
